ASHBERRY B. JORDAN'S DESCENDANTS

ASHBERRY B. JORDAN

A. B. (Berry) Jordan was born in Alabama in 1833. He was twenty-two years old and not married when his family moved to Jones County, Mississippi. In 1856 he married Mary R. Deason, daughter of Amos Deason who was a prominent early settler in Jones County. Since land was plentiful and available, he immediately began the task of acquiring property and establishing a home.

The Civil War interrupted his efforts in this direction. He enlisted in 1862 and served until the end of the war. According to his Confederate Army service record, which is on microfilm in the National Archives in Washington, D. C., A. B. Jordan enlisted in Jones County, Mississippi September 1, 1862. This date does not correspond to the date he gave in Goodspeed's Memoirs, which was April, 1862. However, this discrepancy may be explained if he enlisted in April, 1862, but actually reported for duty in September, 1862. His service record states that Captain McGill was the enlisting officer. He served in the 56th Alabama Partisan Rangers, Company D, and attained the rank of sergeant.

Older surviving members of his family have told of A. B. Jordan's return home at the end of the war. According to their account, he arrived late at night after all of his children were asleep. Being exhausted from the long ride from Forsythe, Georgia, he slept late the next morning. His wife got up and began getting breakfast for the children. Amos, his son who was about four years old, looked in his mother's bedroom and went to the kitchen, quite agitated, and told his mother that there was a man in her bed. He did not recognize his father.

After the Civil War, A. B. Jordan resumed the task of providing for his growing family. He acquired several hundred acres of land and became a successful stock raiser. He became active in the Methodist Church and the Masonic Order. According to Lodge records, in the years 1877, 1882, 1883, 1885, 1886 and 1894, he served as Worshipful Master of the Ellisville Masonic Lodge.

A. B. Jordan was married three times and raised a large family. Many of his descendants will be listed in this record.
